Tribe Is Ready to Roll -- Its Own

Squaxins leverage tax break into a smoking business

Lewis Kamb, Seattle Post-Intelligencer -
On a sunny Tuesday afternoon, business is picking up at the Little Creek Casino and nearby Kamilche Trading Post, and cigarette smoker Albert Nelson has just made a first-time purchase for a longtime habit.

Exiting the trading post -- the Squaxin Island Tribe’s longhouse-themed gas station, liquor store and smoke shop -- Nelson, a 43-year-old Olympia man, admits it was price, more than anything, that attracted him to a new brand of cigarettes.

“Tribal Staff Prepare to Move into New Building

Tribal employees will be busy packing, moving and unpacking during the first part of May as they prepare to occupy the new Administration Building. Limited financial services will be available during that time. Please plan ahead. Housing and Utilities payments should be received by May 5th for deposit. Thank you for your patience and understanding during our move.

With Complete and Complete Lights hitting the Tribe’s convenience store earlier this month, the Squaxins are one of only two American Indian tribes now selling their own brands of cigarettes.

And tribal leaders say that later this year, when the Tribe’s Skookum Creek Tobacco Co. begins mass production at a new, 25,000-square-foot factory behind the casino, the Squaxins will own and operate the only large-scale cigarette manufacturing plant on the West Coast.

But it’s largely an exception in federal law that has the Squaxins eyeing success through smokes.

“With this product,” explains Robert Whitener Jr., president and CEO of Island Enterprise Inc., the company in charge of the Tribe’s economic development ventures, “we don’t have to have a tax equal to the state’s on our cigarettes.”

By manufacturing its own cigarettes, the Tribe is taking advantage of a federal legal exception that allows it to avoid imposing taxes on its Complete brand equal to the state’s cigarette taxes -- now $1.425 per pack, the fifth-highest in the nation.

It’s a business venture that once again will give the Squaxin Island Tribe a huge price advantage in Washington’s cigarette wars, an advantage that all but evaporated for the Squaxins and several other tribes a little more than two years ago.

Indians who buy them on reservations are supposed to be taxed fully.

But the state has no enforcement rights in Indian country -- the reservations and trust lands of sovereign Indian nations.

So the state Liquor Control Board and the Washington State Patrol began beefing up policing tactics off the reservations, including intercepting reservation-bound shipments of “contraband” cigarettes without the state tax stamps required under Washington law.

“It really hurt our business,” Whitener says. “The state had made it too dangerous for the customer to buy from tribes.”

Under the compacts, several tribes agreed to impose an equivalent tax on tribal cigarette sales and use the collected money for tribal government services. But largely, the tribes’ cigarette price advantage was eliminated.

And although the Squaxins led the way in the tribal-state cigarette compromise -- in late 2001, the Tribe became the first to sign such a compact -- all the while, they had bigger plans.

Before it signed the compact, the Tribe made it widely known it intended to go into cigarette manufacturing.

It was a venture that the Squaxins had vetted with the state Department of Revenue to ensure the Tribe and state agreed: Tribally produced cigarettes would be exempt from any equivalent tax.

“We don’t have an issue with it,” says Leslie Cushman, the department’s assistant director of special programs and tribal liaison. “They’ve invested in business, they’ve bought the equipment, and they’ll do the manufacturing on Indian land. That pre-empts the tax on non-Indians.”

Whitener, the Squaxin business leader, said that going into cigarette manufacturing is simply “a logical extension for our tribe. We know the business.”

Since the mid-1970s, the Tribe has sold cigarettes at its Kamilche Trading Post.

Kristin Penn stocks shelves with Skookum Tobacco’s Complete cigarettes at the Kamilche Trading Post. The brand now is made in North Carolina, but production will soon move to the Squaxin Island Tribe’s plant near Shelton.

State makes a deal

In late 2001, after a decades-old dispute, more than half the federally recognized Indian tribes in Washington agreed to negotiate cigarette tax compacts with the state -- agreements that require each tribe to impose its own tribal tax on cigarettes equal to the state’s soaring cigarette tax.

The matter came to a head when the state calculated losses of some $69 million a year in tax revenue, money lost when non-Indian smokers headed to reservations to dodge state cigarette and sales taxes by buying cut-rate, tax-free smokes.

Although legally, tribal members don’t have to pay taxes on cigarettes, non-

Are you interested in working for Squaxin Island Tribe this summer?

Please contact Patti or Jill in Human Resources at the Tribal Center (360.426.9781) to get an application.

Application Deadline is June 1st

It’s that time of year again - time to begin recruitment of Squaxin Island tribal youth who desire summer employment with the Tribe. If you are between the ages of 14 and 21 and are interested in working for six weeks this summer, please contact Patti Puhn or Jill Krise in Human Resources to get an application. You must submit an application even if you participated in the program last year.

The six weeks of employment will begin on Tuesday, July 6th and will run through Friday, August 13th. All of the youth workers will work an eight hour day Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday and have a half-day training session each Wednesday.

Please submit your application by June 1st so that we have time to find positions for all who complete the application process. We look forward to hearing from you.

Post, one of the only constant income streams for tribal government before its casino was built in 1995.

In the first year after the Squaxins signed the cigarette compact, the Tribe’s yearly gross from cigarette sales fell to half of its typical level, he says.

The manufacturing venture is a way “to stabilize the tribal store,” Whitener adds, and to diversify the Tribe’s economy from reliance on gambling.

Through Island Enterprises Inc., the 700-member Squaxin Island Tribe has worked hard at economic diversification. The tribal firm -- a holding company separate from tribal government -- looks for ways to invest gaming revenues into existing or new tribal businesses.

Along with the Kamilche Trading Post, the Tribe owns and runs the Harstine Oyster Company. Last year, the Tribe opened a hotel adjoining its casino. And in 1999, it applied for a license from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to operate its Skookum Creek Tobacco manufacturing plant.

With the ATF license in place, construction of the cigarette factory is nearly finished. Complete with an air-conditioning system to control humidity, the factory has the capacity to manufacture about 100,000 cartons, or 20 million cigarettes, per month.

The Tribe bought used cigarette-manufacturing equipment, including one machine that rolls tobacco into paper and adds filters and another that packages the smokes. The machines are now being rebuilt in England, and two tribal technicians soon will travel there for training.

One goal: Creating jobs

By November 1, all equipment will be in place at the Tribe’s plant, with cigarette manufacturing in full swing, Whitener says. “We’ll be the first and only tribe in Washington in the cigarette-manufacturing business.”

Not to mention one of only a few nationwide. The Omaha Tribe in Nebraska recently ended a similar endeavor, leaving the Seneca-Cayuga of Oklahoma as the only tribal government in the United States manufacturing tobacco products. A smattering of individual American Indians also operate cigarette manufacturing firms independently, including the successful Smokin’ Joes brand in western New York.

But it was job opportunities -- more than the chance to be pioneers -- that sold the idea to Squaxin tribal members. A survey found most tribal members supported the plan, as the factory would offer jobs to those with manufacturing skills -- something the Tribe’s casino and other enterprises don’t afford, Whitener says.

In all, the factory is expected to employ about 20 workers, with 10 more likely to be added to help with distribution, he says.

Until the factory is up and running, the Tribe’s North Carolina-based tobacco supplier, Standard Commercial, will manufacture and ship to the Tribe its brand of Complete and Complete Lights, made from a tobacco blend mixed specifically for the Squaxin venture.

The tobacco used in the Tribe’s cigarettes is deemed “second tier” -- not of as high quality as tobacco used for major brands, such as Marlboro and Camel, but on par with higher-end, cheaper brands such as Basic and GPC, Whitener says.

It’s those cheaper brands the Tribe is targeting for competition. While the tribal store still will sell -- and collect equivalent taxes on -- other brands of cigarettes, it’s heavily promoting the Tribe’s Complete brand.

The Tribe has set an introductory price on 10-pack cartons of Completes at $14.99. Comparatively, at a Safeway store in nearby Olympia, Basics are selling for $39.99 a carton, with Marlboros at $42.99.

Eventually, the Squaxins plan to raise prices on Completes.

And although the tribal tax rate on its cigarettes has yet to be decided, “it will be substantially less than the state rate,” Whitener says.

As with tribal taxes collected on other cigarette sales, tax revenues from the Tribe’s cigarettes will help pay for tribal government services -- from law enforcement to day care.

And the Tribe hopes to expand its market -- distributing its cigarettes to retailers nationally and internationally, Whitener says. The tribe also is considering producing other tobacco products, including smokeless tobacco and cigars, as well as using its plant to do packaging for other cigarette brands. “You don’t build a factory for one store,” Whitener says.

But for now, the Tribe is excited about its own brand. In the first week of sales, the tribal store sold 11 cases of Completes containing about 60 cartons each, making it one of the Kamilche Trading Post’s biggest sellers, sales clerks say.

And with the tribal smokes’ clear price advantage, die-hard smokers such as Nelson say they’re more than willing to switch brands.

“With all these anti-smoking campaigns, cigarettes are taxed to hell,” Nelson says. “If the Tribe can sell ‘em cheaper, more power to them.”
Squaxin Youth Perform the Joyce Cheeka Play "The Rememberer"

Mason County Journal - In conjunction with Skokomish and Squaxin Island youth, CHOICE High School presented a play April 16 & 17 at the Shelton High School Auditorium entitled The Rememberer, about a Squaxin Island Indian woman torn between two cultures in the early 20th century.

The Rememberer is a true story taken from the memoirs of a Squaxin Native woman, Joyce Simmons Cheeka. As a girl, she was chosen to become her tribe’s next Rememberer, which gave her the duty of remembering all of the stories of her people. In 1910, she was taken from her tribe and put in a government-run Tulalip Boarding School in Marysville. Students at the school were forbidden to use their native language or practice their culture.

Government officials believed that if the Natives were to survive, they must abandon their customs for the “modern” way of life and so the Rememberer must learn to cope with this strange new world while she struggles to hold on to the history of her people. The play closes with the line, "There is a lot to remember."

This play was first produced in 1994 for the Seattle Children’s Theater, but has never before been produced in Mason County.

Both of the Indian tribes in Mason County supported the project with singing, dancing and cultural expertise as well as financial grants. Organizers of the production have carved a 10-foot house post and have made eight drums and a canoe on wheels. Participants sewed their own costumes including school uniforms and native regalia.

Students are doing reports in historical aspects of the play and have been interviewing their elders as part of a course that earns them academic credits in Washington history and art.

Way to go girls! You are awesome!!! And you are very much appreciated for all your hard work. Job well done! Our hands are up to you!

Tribal Member Kim Burrow
Enjoys Her Management Position at Little Creek Casino Hotel

Hello everyone, it has been nearly eight months since I began my hotel management internship and I thought it might be a good time to let everyone know how things are going. I have been so busy these days that I rarely see anyone any more, including my husband and children. In fact, up until three weeks ago, I hadn’t been on a clam dig in over six months.

I am happy to say things have finally began to calm down at the hotel, although I hesitate to say that out loud for fear of what may be waiting in the wings.

I am totally blown away by everything that has happened to me in the past few months and equally amazed at how much I have been able to learn in such a short period of time. For that I must tip my hat to the management and staff at LCCH. I am truly grateful for all of those who are taking the time to teach me. And you know, it’s really been a team effort by everyone, whether they realize it or not. Each department manager has taught me something new every day - Sam, of course, but also Walt, Doug, Mike, Peggy, Eric, Kelly, Patty, Bea, Terry, Deb, Mark, Dennis and, believe it or not, even Toby the Facilities Director. Every day this extraordinary bunch of people teaches me something new. All of it may not be rocket science, but it’s important nonetheless.

There is so much more to running a property like this than I ever thought, and you know it’s true that the guy or gal that orders the light bulbs is just as important as the guy that signs the checks. We are all part of something special at LCCH and, without the knowledge and experience that each has to offer, my learning experience would certainly be a lot tougher. So, to all of you, I take this opportunity to say “Thank You”.

So what’s in Kim’s future? Along with my day-to-day internship, I am also studying to complete the business degree that I started so many years ago. I am enrolled in an on-line study program which has proven to be very successful for me. I completed my first semester with an overall grade point average of 3.5. Not bad for an old mom that has been out of school for twenty years. Actually, the toughest part was disciplining myself for study time, and finding time when one of my kids wasn’t on the computer chatting away. I am now well into my second semester and am proving to myself that I have what it takes to get this done. Part of my study program allows me to challenge some of the courses I am taking based on life or work experience; this just means that, if I think I know enough about the course, I can take an exam to test my knowledge and, if I pass with a 70% or better, I can elect to skip that course material and receive the credit for the class.

I decided this semester to attempt this with the Human Resource Management course I was in, and what do you know, I passed the exam with a 98%. I realize now how much this life has really taught me. That’s not to say there isn’t more to learn, but, wow, the things you have in your head and you don’t know it!

I hope I will be able to complete my degree by the end of the year, but will not be disappointed if it doesn’t happen until next summer. My education plans this year also will include attending hospitality courses at the University of Las Vegas, Nevada. The program there really sets the standard in the industry, so I am told, and I am really looking forward to attending some of their courses. I am, however, not looking forward to the weather, I really do like the rain.

And the view? Well, lets just say there is no comparison.

As for the hotel, lets just say the first few months have really been more than we anticipated. Our room occupancy has been much better than we planned and the Banquet and Conference Center is positively booming. We have already started booking for New Year’s and have even taking inquiries about dates into 2005. It has become ever so clear to me that what we have is truly something special. Our guests are totally swept away when they see the hotel and it’s amenities. It truly is the finest property this side of Seattle and I am so proud to be a part of it.

If someone was to ask me right now, “what is the thing that you like most about your job?” I would have to say making my guests smile. You would really be amazed at how little it takes to make some people happy; it might be a simple bottle of champagne for the newlyweds, a basket of strawberries for the couple that just stepped out for a night away from the kids or walking the dog of an elderly guest in four inches of snow. Whatever it is, whatever it takes, I am glad to be able to do it. I am proud to say that I am a Squaxin Island tribal member and this is my hotel. I would like to encourage any of you that have not had the chance to stay at the hotel or not for your support, this internship would not be possible. You are my strength. To my family, thanks, for without you, my family surely would have starved to death in December. Thanks to Mom and Dad for helping with Kaitlyn and to the executive team at LCCH for selecting me for this internship. I will do my best not let you down.

Squaxin Island Tribe - Klah-Che-Min Newsletter - May, 2004 - Page 8
Initiative king Tim Eyman is paying himself a $3,100-a-week salary from campaign contributions to his new proposal to cut state property taxes by $400 million a year.

Taxes on expanded non-tribal gambling, which Eyman’s initiative would also permit, would generate $400 million annually to plug that revenue gap, he contends.

In an e-mail sent to supporters, he said he has already drawn a check for the week of March 21 and plans to continue taking $3,100 per week to manage the campaign to get the new initiative qualified for the fall ballot.

For the 15 weeks between March 21 and the July 2 deadline for submitting voter signatures to the secretary of state, he will earn $46,500.

Eyman didn’t indicate what his salary situation will be after July 2 if the “Just Treat Us the Same” initiative qualifies for the ballot.

Eyman, who has turned initiative politics into a cottage industry, declined further comment.

Critics blasted him.

“It just validates what we’re said all these years, that it’s about profit and maintaining a business -- nothing to do with crafting good policy,” said political consultant Christian Sinderman.

“He has tried to maintain this faux populist image,” said critic David Goldstein of TaxSanity.org., adding the salary disclosure should remove any doubt that Eyman is out to line his own pockets.

Eyman included his revelation part-way through an e-mail campaign update and financial solicitation to backers.

“I also wanted to let you know that I’ve decided to compensate myself for my political work on behalf of Just Treat Us the Same. It’s a reasonable level of compensation, considering the $400 million per year in property tax relief that it offers taxpayers.”

Eyman said he has raised $158,500 in the last two weeks. “That’s a good start, but much more needs to be done,” he wrote.

Eyman’s initiative would allow non-tribal businesses, such as bowling alleys, bars and mini-casinos, to operate as many electronic slot machines as tribes are authorized to have.

Washington’s 27 tribes, operating under compacts with the state, run more than 13,000 of the faux slots as a big feature of their casinos.

The Museum Library and Research Center initiated an "Artist in Residence" project funded by the Ford Foundation with renowned Quinault carver, Randy Capoeman beginning Monday, April 19, 2004. The residency is at the museum and will run approximately six weeks.

Randy began work in mid-April on a 25-foot-long cedar log that arrived from the Quinault Indian Reservation on April 17. The log was donated by Gary Davis, a property owner on the Quinault Reservation, and transported by Kim Johnson, an Olympia logger.

Randy, who lives in Taholah, is known for his outstanding art prints. Carving has also become one of his specialties.

Randy was born on the Quinault Indian Reservation on September 22, 1956. Through Dick Jackson, Randy's great-grandfather, Randy has Squaxin Island ancestry. Dick Jackson's daughter, Catherine Jackson Capoeman is Randy's mother. His family comes from a very traditional background. Randy grew up watching his grandfather carve river canoes and his grandmother weave cedar baskets. Randy began to draw in the early 60's and, as his talent grew, his interest became heightened by his experiences in song and dance.

"There was a revival of Northwest Indian dance and a group of our kids traveled the country showing the tradition of our ancestors," Randy said. "My father was a fisherman first, then became a logger. But, first and foremost, our father took care of us - all eight of us girls and boys."

As Randy entered the 9th grade, he researched more information about Northwest Coast art, and became self-taught in this traditional art form. His first formal training was a two-week class in 1974. It all began to come together for him as he began to develop and refine his skills. In 1989, Randy did a limited edition print for local galleries that became a huge success. He began to do art full time and soon became well connected in the art field. After about two years, Randy settled into a nine-to-five job for a period of time.

In the year 2000 Randy began to develop an interest in carving cedar. This was a very new media for him, so he researched and studied the art for about six months. Randy received his first job restoring a 10-foot totem pole for the Queets Clearwater School. He totally restored the totem and claims this was where he learned how to read the grain of cedar wood. He developed his skills to the point where he had gained enough confidence to carve a totem pole solo for the Lake Quinault Resort. His successful completion of the pole became a confidence builder for him.

Randy received another gift from the Creator right after completion of the Lake Quinault Resort project. He was given a cedar log to carve another 22-foot totem pole and took three months off from work to complete the project. He had no help when he first started, so he invited two teenagers from home to help. He carved Thunderbird accompanied by Killer Whale, Bear and Frog. The Institute for Community Leadership in Kent, Washington bought the totem and it now sits majestically at the entrance of their building.

Randy’s goal is to teach youth the Northwest Coast style of drawing and totem carving to the best of his ability.

Randy has three children: daughter, Angel, 10; son, Titus, 13; and daughter, Charisse, 14.

He is commuting daily from Taholah and was given leave from his regular job managing the gift shop at the Quinault casino.

Randy said the welcoming pole will feature the mask of an eagle.

All Squaxin Island carvers are invited to participate in the project. Once finished, the pole will be transported to the property of former Secretary of State Ralph Munro at Mud Bay where the Tribe, archaeologists and South Puget Sound Community College have been excavating an ancient tribal village site.

Regular museum admission applies to this project. Call 360.432.3851 for questions or directions.
Meal Program Menu

Hike, lounge and enjoy the outdoors at Millersylvania Park offers miles of trails for hiking and biking, lake for boating and camping throughout year

What
Millersylvania State Park

Where
South of Tumwater on Tilley Road.

To Do
Millersylvania, with 842 acres of lush fir and cedar forest, campgrounds, trails and Deep Lake, is South Sound’s year-round outdoor playground. Camping is allowed all year, and the 8.6 miles of hiking trails and 7.6 miles of biking trails are also popular with day visitors. Millersylvania was logged early in the last century, and hikers still find weathered cedar stumps notched for logger’s springboards -- planks that tree fallers stood on while they worked their saws. Millersylvania has three picnic areas and table sites throughout the park.

Fishing
Deep Lake is a popular fishing hole that will open April 24. Anglers fish for stocked rainbow trout and wild bluegill, pumpkinseed and bass. Deep Lake is one of the best South Sound fishing holes for eager-biting and tasty bluegill and pumpkinseed. A fishing dock near the launch ramp is a good place for kids to catch their first panfish.

Boating
The lake is open to nonmotorized boats. The launch ramp is shallow, and boaters are limited to small boats that can be launched by hand. Deep Lake has milfoil, so boaters must clean all weeds off boats and trailers before leaving the park.

Swimming
Deep Lake has a swimming area that gets a lot of use during the summer.

Camping
There are sites for tents, trailers or motor homes. Check-in time is 2:30 p.m. and check-out time is 1 p.m. Call 1-888-226-7688 or visit www.parks.wa.gov. for reservations.

Wildlife
Spring brings many wild animals and birds to Millersylvania. Deer, mallard ducks, herons and raccoons were around during a visit earlier this week. Watch for raccoon tracks in sandy areas around Deep Lake. Watch for songbirds near the campgrounds and picnic areas.

Picnics
Millersylvania’s three big picnic shelters, which have stoves, water, grills and electricity, can handle more than 100 people, but they must be reserved. Call 888-226-7688 for reservations.

Parking
State Parks charges $5 a day to park at Millersylvania.

Cautions
The lake is weedy during the summer, and waders can get tangled in plants or getting a ducking in a sudden drop off. Swim or wade with a buddy, and don’t let children play in the water without close supervision. Park roads get a lot of traffic, so keep an eye on children riding bikes or skateboards.

Directions
From Olympia, take Interstate 5 south to Exit 99. Cross back over I-5 and follow 93rd Avenue to Tilley Road. Turn right on Tilley. The park is on Tilley Road between 113th Avenue and Maytown Road.

Equipment
Hiking shoes, sunglasses, bug spray, sunscreen and the outdoor equipment you need for biking, camping, fishing, boating, swimming and loafing.

History
Millersylvania’s 842 acres were homesteaded in 1855 and eventually sold to a man named John Miller. Miller’s family gave the land to the state in 1921. In 1935, the Civilian Conservation Corps built most of the buildings at the park.

Carbohydrates:
How Much is Healthy?

Did you miss the workshop on this topic on Wednesday, March 24th presented by Patty Suskin, our very own Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator?

Thirty two people enjoyed lunch, a chance at door prizes and information about carbohydrates from Patty’s first Powerpoint presentation! Here are some of the highlights:

What are carbohydrates?
How much do we need?

• Carbohydrates are important macronutrients and are found in: vegetables, grains, fruits, milk products and sugars. (However, sugars do not contain the fiber & other nutrients /vitamins the others do)
• Carbohydrates are needed to fuel the brain, a minimum of 130 grams of carbohydrates each day. (Most Americans take in at least 200 grams of carbohydrates a day)
• Without enough carbohydrates, a person lacks energy and can’t think straight.
• The American Heart Association recommends 55 percent of our total calories should be from carbohydrates
• Low carbohydrates does not equal low calories
• The Atkins diet is lower than 100 grams of carbohydrates a day, which is not enough for your brain to work properly.

Consequences of following a low carbohydrate eating plan for more than six months:

• Increased cancer risk
• Increased heart disease risk
• Poor long term weight loss
• Reduced athletic performance
• Increased gout
• Increased kidney stones
• Increased osteoporosis
• Fainting
• Keto breath
• Insufficient vitamin, mineral and fiber intake

What can I do to lose weight? or What can I do to be healthier?

• Eat breakfast
• Eat every 4 to 5 hours (don’t skip meals)
• Drink water
• Be aware of the size of your portions of food or drink
• Listen to your body - are you satisfied? (not stuffed)
• Eat vegetables
• Eat fruits
• Fill up on fiber: beans, whole grains, vegetables and fruits
• Limit chips, cookies, fries, candy and other desserts
• Be more active
• Eat more fish and other seafood
• Check your beverages for hidden calories
• Use the Food Guide Pyramid for healthy eating ideas:
  - SET A GOAL - Eat something from at least three food groups on the pyramid during each meal and one or two food groups during each snack

Rules for A Healthier YOU:

• DIET IS A FOUR LETTER WORD
• Ask Yourself: Can I do this for the rest of my life? If not, why now?
• No forbidden foods - All foods can be enjoyed
• Moderation, Not Elimination - Enjoy foods with little nutritional value in smaller amounts and less often
• Progress not Perfection – Praise yourself for any healthier habits you adapt and reward yourself with a non-food reward

Setting Health Goals

• Start small & gradually increase
• Make them measurable
• Work on one or two goals at a time
• Set up a non-food reward for yourself when you have established a new habit

Examples of measurable health goals:

• I will walk for 10 minutes, three days a week (ultimate goal - walk 30 minutes 5 days a week)
• Instead of eating vegetables twice a week, I will eat vegetables three times a week (ultimate goal - eat three vegetable servings a day)

Healthy Math

• 3,500 calories equals one pound. To lose a pound of fat you must decrease your calorie intake or increase your activity by 3500 calories!
• 500 calories/day X 7 days/wk = 3,500 calories or one pound
• Walk a mile - about 100 calories
• Realistic weight loss is 1 to 2 pounds a week
• Think inches, not pounds - check monthly
• Muscle weighs more than fat, so don’t rely on the scale - check how you fit in your clothing
• Anyone can lose, can you KEEP IT OFF?

Thank you to the following people who helped me with set up and clean up: Arlene Strope, Vicky York, Sharon Johns, Lucy James, Tom Ryke, Gloria Hill, and any others I forgot to mention. Thank you to Katie Suskin, Daniel Suskin, and Mark West for their patience & help with Powerpoint!

For more individualized help towards a healthier you, call Patty Suskin, Registered Dietitian and Diabetes Educator for an appointment at (360) 432-3929 or stop by the clinic.
The Truth
About Low-Carb Products
As America goes crazy for low-carb diets, new terms and claims are popping up on food labels, ads and menus. Unfortunately, not all of these terms mean what you might think. Here are some important tips to help you select your carbohydrates wisely.

Q: Are claims – like low-carb – legal on food packages?
A: No, carbohydrate claims have not been approved by the government. Technically, a label that says ‘low-carb’ or ‘no-carb’ is violating the law. The Food and Drug Administration has not issued regulations about carbohydrate claims. Companies are supposed to avoid false or misleading statements. But, for now, it is "buyer beware."

Q: What do all these carb terms really mean?
A: The current low-carb terminology is essentially meaningless. ‘Net carbs,’ ‘impact carbs,’ and ‘effective carbs’ do not have standard definitions and no one is checking their accuracy. Companies get these numbers (which are of questionable clinical significance) by subtracting fiber and sugar alcohols from total carbohydrates.

Q: What are sugar alcohols?
A: Made from sugar, these compounds are used to sweeten foods. Sugar alcohols (manitol, sorbitol, and xylitol) generally have fewer calories than sugar. They are converted to blood glucose, but at a slower rate than sugar or starch. CAUTION: High intakes of sugar alcohols can cause diarrhea and gas in some people.

Q: Are low-carb products lower in calories?
A: Not necessarily; they can have the same, or higher, calorie levels. Since there are no standards or regulations, low-carb items often have as many, or more, calories than their conventional counterparts. Many low-carb candies have more calories and fat than regular candies. Some low-carb beers have just five less calories than light beer.

Q: Are low-carb products better for you than conventional items?
A: Not usually; low-carb brownies are no healthier than regular ones. Minimally-processed whole foods are the best choices for a healthy weight. These naturally nutrient-rich foods (lots of nutrients per calorie) include whole grains; fruits and vegetables; lean meat, fish and poultry; nuts and legumes; and low-fat dairy foods.

Q: Why are low-carb products usually so much more expensive?
A: Manufacturers will charge a premium price when they can get it. Food companies know when they can cash in on hot consumer trends – and low-carb is ‘in’ right now. Be a savvy shopper – and don’t be fooled by prices that are two to four times those for regular products. Save your money for some delicious fresh produce!

12 Nutrient-Rich, Carb-Smart, Super Snacks
A balanced snack can make all the difference in your blood sugar, hunger levels, ability to concentrate, and general attitude. All it takes is some lean protein balanced with nutrient-rich carbohydrates (from whole grains, fruits, or vegetables). Pack at least one super snack into your day – and you’ll get an energy boost, long-lasting satisfaction, and the nutrients your body needs to stay strong and healthy.

1. Oatmeal with low-fat milk: All it takes is one minute to heat up a bowl of wholesome nutrients and fiber in the microwave.

2. Vanilla yogurt with berries: Take one cup of yogurt and stir in half a cup of blueberries, raspberries or strawberries (frozen or fresh).

3. Almonds and dried fruit: Start with a small handful of nuts and add your favorite dried fruit (raisins, apricots, or apples).

4. Cheddar cheese and an apple: Combine creamy and crunchy, with an ounce of sharp cheese and a crisp Granny Smith for tartness.

5. Beef jerky and pea pods: With teriyaki jerky (1-2 ounces), this low-fat treat will taste like a Chinese take-out mini-meal.

6. Turkey on multi-grain bread: A slice of smoked turkey, a slice of whole grain bread and a bit of your favorite mustard. Yummy!!

7. Peanut butter on bananas: Whether you like creamy or crunchy, a tablespoon or two of peanut butter makes this a perfect snack for kids of all ages.

8. Cottage cheese and fruit: Juice-packed, canned fruit goes great with a half cup of cottage cheese. Try pineapple, peaches, or pears.

9. Cheese stick and tomatoes: Easy to take anywhere, enjoy a mozzarella cheese stick with sweet cherry or grapes tomatoes.

10. Salad with sunflower seeds: Sprinkle a tablespoon of crunchy seeds on leftover salad and dress lightly with olive oil and vinegar.

11. Wheat wrap with cheese: Pick a slice of your favorite cheese and roll it up in a whole wheat tortilla or other flavored wrap.

12. Microwave bean soup: Instant soups (or beans and rice combo) make quick, heart-healthy, cold-weather snacks.

12 Ways to Add Value to Your Daily Walk
A daily walk is one of the best ways to maintain a healthy weight. Research also shows that 30 to 45-minutes of brisk walking helps boost your immune system, reduce your risk of disease, and lower your stress level. If these benefits aren’t enough to get you off the couch, here are twelve easy ways to make your walking time even more valuable.

1. Take a friend: Walking and talking with a friend is good for your body, good for your heart, and good for your soul.

2. Take a child: See the world through the eyes of a child – in a stroller, in a wagon, in a backpack, or just hand-in-hand.

3. Take a pet: America’s pets are facing their own weight crisis. Do your dog a favor – take a long walk together.

4. Take a song on CD or tape: Music lightens every step – and makes the time go faster. Pick your favorite tunes and pick up the pace.

5. Take a book (on tape): If you need to do two things at once, walking and listening to books on tape is the perfect solution.

6. Take a camera: Want to be a better photographer? Make every walk a photo expedition and you’ll be a pro in no time.

7. Learn about birds: Wherever you walk outdoors, there are birds to watch and hear. Perhaps it’s time to start your lifetime list.

8. Learn about plants: City parks, country roads, and wilderness trails all have flowers and trees waiting to be enjoyed.

9. Learn about geology: With a little reading and a lot of observation, you can learn about the forces that shape our land.

10. Learn about history: History is all around us. Use a map or guidebook to learn what happened before your time.

11. Learn about your community: Become more informed and more involved by walking around your neighborhood and your town.

12. Learn a language: Language tapes or CDs make ideal walking companions – and you can even practice our loud!

AIDS

Can Indian Kids Get It?
What do you know about AIDS? You have heard lots of things about AIDS. Maybe you still think Indians don’t get AIDS. NOT TRUE! AIDS is a disease caused by the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). The virus knocks out your body’s immune system so that it can’t fight off infections anymore.

INDIANS ARE DYING FROM AIDS!
Before 1982 only two Indians were known to have AIDS. As of September 1988, 77 Indians had AIDS - half of those Indians died. And the number goes up every year. Today, there are two Indian teenagers with AIDS.

HOW DO YOU GET AIDS? The AIDS virus is found in body fluids: blood, semen and vaginal secretions.

HOW IS THE AIDS VIRUS SPREAD?
The AIDS virus is passed (traded) from one body to the next during sex or by sharing IV drug needles. The AIDS virus can also be passed from mom to baby (if mom is HIV infected).

RISKY BEHAVIOR SPREADS AIDS!
The safest thing is to not have sex, but if you do, Use a FRESH LATEX CONDOM WITH NX9 EVERY TIME WITH EVERY ONE.

DRUG USE CAN SPREAD AIDS!
The safest thing to do is not use IV drugs (shooting up)! DON’T SHARE NEEDLES.

ALCOHOL CAN SPREAD AIDS!
Alcohol changes your behavior. Drinking and partying makes you forget about AIDS. You can’t afford to forget about using condoms. THE BIG EXCUSE: “I was drunk and didn’t know what I was doing.” Excuses won’t protect anyone from AIDS…only YOU can.

Lorretta Case and Doe Bridge - Family, friends and co-workers, I write this for you. Have you ever seen the expression on the face of a child the first time they get to taste candy? They don’t like to share!!! And when they do, they cry and complain that the other person got more. The Tribe receives money and every department wants some. It kind of reminds me of this story about the boss:

The eyes said, "I want to be the boss!" The arms said, "No!"

The eyes asked, "Why?"

The arms said, "I get everything for you." The eyes said, "But I let you see everything you want to get!"

So the legs said, "No! No! I want to be the boss because I take you everywhere you want to go." So the rectum said, "Hoe! Hoe!" and made the rectum mad. Pretty soon the eyes became foggy, the arms were so weak they could not lift anything and the legs, too, were weak. They could not walk.

What does that story tell you???

It is great to have family, friends and co-workers who are as precious as the sight of a rainbow after a cloudy day. Some of us are lemons and others are oranges. We have our ups and downs. It doesn’t matter who is right or who is wrong. But what does matter is that we work together!!! We all want to be appreciated. Our works are our thoughts and sometimes they are painful like a slap across the face. At other times they are as delightful as apple pie. To work alone is nothing. To be able to work with family, friends and co-workers is exquisite as we walk hand in hand.

Our children are our future, and someday they will follow in our footsteps. It is very important that they have self-esteem, jobs, college, parenting classes, and most of all, protection from molestation, alcohol and drugs. If you cannot do this, what good is it to have all the money, cars, houses and land? Nothing is more important than family!!! Never forget who you are and where you come from!!! Maintaining pride, dignity and honoring the old ways.

Yolanda Perez Harvey

Family Services Manager

Hi, my name is Yolanda Harvey. I was born in Texas and raised in Southern California. My parents are both deceased (dad in 2000, mom in 2002).

I am Hispanic and Yaqui Indian. I have been married to Robert Harvey since 1994. We live in Hansville (North Kitsap) and I have two children from previous marriage: John, 32 yrs and Gina, 30 yrs.

John is a pharmacist and Gina is a hair stylist. We have three grandchildren: Jared, 13, Justeen, 6 and Isaiah, 2.

We also own two businesses: Salon Madison-Bainbridge Island (started in 1997) and Y and R Stump Grinding (started in 1994).

I earned a bachelors degree in Psychology in 1999 and a MSW (Master of Social Work) in 2003, both from the University of Washington.

From 1999-2004, I was the Indian Child Welfare (ICW) Case Worker and ICW Program Manager for the Port Gamble S’Klallam Tribe on the Little Boston Reservation, Kingston.

We lived on the Little Boston Reservation from 1990-1994. My granddaughter, Justeen, is S’Klallam/Suquamish and Alaska Aleutian/Eskimo as well as Hispanic/Yaqui, German and Welsh.

My hobbies and interests include collecting marine and Native art, miniature dachshunds (3) and traveling to Mexico and Hawaii.

My professional interests include master’s level therapy in child mental health, child advocacy in family violence and program administration and training.

Prior to working for the Port Gamble S’Klallam Tribe, I had seven years in banking and 13 years in publishing.

Pam Hammond

Hi, my name is Pam Hammond and I am a temporary employee at Health and Human Services. In the absence of Jen Olson, I am working on special projects that include coordination of information and activities related to the Tribe’s Health Service and Facilities Master Plan. I am also working closely with Paula Henry, helping her coordinate senior activities.

I am a member of the Hoopa Valley Tribe located in northern California, and I am a graduate student at the Evergreen State College. I will be graduating from the Tribal Master’s in Public Administration program this June. Even though my tenure here with the Squaxin Island Tribe is likely to be a short one, it has been a very positive experience. I feel privileged to have worked with such a progressive tribe that strives to maintain a strong vision of prosperity and well-being for the future of their people.

Ni’-whong-we’ na’-sa-dethl.

Wish you well (good things).

Ni’-whong-we’ ah’-din.

You guys are doing good (for your people).

Gathering Clams for the Potlatch

The story of Frogs and Tide is told by many Native Americans throughout the Puget Sound region.

b(ə)sutəb çaʔ ʔə tiʔ ʔələƛəlx,
ʔəl ʔəxswəʔəʔəl ʔə tiʔ swəʔiq ʔəl kʷəʔədəʔəb.
The elders say to us that when the frogs appear in the warm time of the year, gəl huy ʔəxswəʔəʔəbəx ʔə tiʔ swəʔiq,
then the frogs will call out now.
ʔəxswəʔəʔəb ʔə tiʔ swəʔiq,
The frogs are habitually saying.
"ʔəə ʔəwədəc,
"Tide come (in)
"Tide go (out)."

"ʔəə ʔəwədəc,
"Tide come (in)
"Tide go (out)."

"ʔəə ʔəwədəc,
"Tide come (in)
"Tide go (out)."

dəʔəx ʔəxshuy ʔə tiʔ swəʔiq,
Now this is what the frogs habitually do.

Brenda Dorsey - I watched while the delighted children ran straight to the shore with their buckets, some so small I thought they would soon tire. They didn’t. Instead, they dug and dug, piling small Manila and Little Necks and large Butter clams into their stash which grew larger and larger. They were so enthralled with the task of gathering clams for the upcoming potlatch they had to be strongly encouraged to come and eat lunch.

Finally they began devouring the hot dogs, clams and oysters from the fire, enjoying the ease of eating with their fingers and the reward of their work which seemed more like play.

The language and customs of their ancestors were taught on the land where their spirit remains strong. Children whose spirits are free are freer to learn. The eagle flew over us when we arrived and perched on a nearby tree, as though he wished to witness this joy of children being free.

Even when the pick-up boats arrived, the children continued to dig for clams. I never once heard them complain or argue, their happiness so evident in the bright eyes that sparkled.

The little ones huddled in the boat with their buckets full and much of their bodies covered in sand. Broad smiles appeared when the wind rushed by the movement of the boat. This experience was pure delight, for them and for me.

Many thanks to all who planned and shared this experience of children gathering the potlatch clams. A special thanks to Barbara Whitener for sharing this story with us and Vicki Kruger who continues to give so much of herself by passing the traditions on to the children and making sure the clams are preserved for the potlatch.
Thanks to Arnold Cooper for providing transportation and Will Henderson and Arnold’s sidekick for helping on the way back. Thanks to Barbara Whitener for telling the kids the story about frogs, and Vicki Kruger for teaching the kids clam identification and the Lushootseed word for butter clams. Thanks to the drummers and singers. Thanks to all the adults who went along and helped. Butter clams were dug for the potlatch give-away and Little Necks were dug and traded for Razor clams to be served at the potlatch dinner.

Warriors

Lorretta Case and Doe Bridge - Your friends, co-workers and family appreciate all the hard work you women warriors do to help our tribe - Vicki Kruger and Charlene Krise.

Vicki is the Wolf - the protector of the children.

Charlene is the Eagle - the keeper of knowledge.

Both of these gifts are a blessing. And we have hope for the future.

One is bold, out-spoken and hated for her bluntness. At our social events she stands alone, making sure the children are serving the elders and learning respect. She gives instruction in dancing and singing. She provides transportation and self-esteem out of her own pocket.

The other is silent with cunning. When she prepares for the kill, she is deadly (on the hunt for funding for the museum and protecting knowledge for the people).

It is only instinct to want to touch a rose, yet you are often stung by the thorns that protect its beauty.

The beauty of the wolf and the eagle. Thank you for preserving the old ways.—

MARCH 27, 2004 - Squaxin Island Natural Resources Department staffers and family participated in replanting the Deschutes Parkway Interpretive Trail last month. Participants included: Jeff Dickison, Tracy Farrell, John Konovsky, Paula LaFlame, Colleen Seto, Scott Steltzner and families. Thank you everyone for your support.

This replanting project was sponsored by the Washington State Department of General Administration, The Stream Team, The Native Plant Salvage Project and WDOT. It is a restoration and outreach project for the community to learn about and recognize the significance of native plants and their role in riparian habitat. These plants were placed on the border of a wetland and Capital lake after the reconstruction of a walkway damaged in the Nisqually earthquake. Squaxin Island Tribal Natural Resources staff participated in this effort to restore habitat and give support to a successful community event.
Native Americans, We Have Purpose
By Debbie Obi, March 2004
What I’m about to say is true to the best of my knowledge (that I have learned so far)!
When I say "we," I’m referring to Native Americans.
We are all put on this Earth by our Creator for a purpose.
Whatever this purpose is, we won’t know until its time.
All that we learn is passed down from our elders, from their elders and so on.
That’s how we learn and, as we grow older, we grow wiser.
We are not put on the Earth to hurt one another.
A word like (or similar to) "jealousy" was never in our vocabulary.
There are many people who forget about our purpose and get weak and go astray.
Our Creator deals with these people in his own way.
That’s why I always say "never wish evil or bad on anyone."
It’ll turn back on you and be twice as bad.
The people our Creator deals with suffer till the day they die.
But they are forgiven in the next world.
So always remember you are here for a purpose. Never forget this!
Remember all the lessons and knowledge that were passed down to us, because when we know what our purpose is, we’ll be doing the best we can!
There are very few of us left. Remember we are here for a purpose.
I’m one of them. The owl is my protector. He reminds me all the time.
In spirit and soul we get wiser and stronger with all our knowledge.
So never let your guard down and go astray, even though it’s easy to forget we are here for a purpose.
Our Creator will always provide for us and long as we keep on the right path.
Money means nothing to us, As I mentioned, our Creator will provide for us.
Never take more than you need and always return something for what you have taken.
Tribal Justice Summit
Mike Evans - The second annual Washington State Tribal/County Criminal Justice Summit was held at the Little Creek Casino/Hotel on March 3rd and 4th. Last year’s forum, organized under the theme, “Building New Partnerships for Community Safety,” was very successful.

This year’s summit was entitled, “We’re Better Together.” During the two day summit, this theme was applied to issues like methamphetamine use, mutual aid, cross deputizing, juvenile justice, domestic violence and homeland security.

Day One:
Dave Whitener provided the invocation and Chairman Lopeman gave the opening remarks.

Debora Juarez, an attorney with WILLIAMS, KASTNER & GIBBS, spoke about economic development and the evolution of the relationship between the tribes and the counties.

There was a panel discussion with local Tribal Chairpersons.

After lunch there were several break out sessions, which involved discussions on drugs, meth and clean up; mutual aid agreements/cross deputizing; working with native juvenile offenders; and domestic violence.

Shannon Inglis, Assistant Attorney General, provided a Legislative update regarding legislation of particular interest to criminal justice.

A guided tour of the Squaxin Island Tribal Museum preceded dinner.

A presentation by the Squaxin Island Drum Group and a speech by Attorney General Christine Gregoire accompanied dinner. Closing prayer was presented by Dave Whitener.

Day Two:
Squaxin Island Chief of Police Robbin Rhoades opened day two with comments and played a piece on his flute.

The opening address was presented by Washington State Patrol Chief Lowell Porter. He was followed by facilitated discussion on the successes which have been attained since the last summit. Small working groups met to work on issues, problems and solutions which were unique to the local areas.

After lunch, participants were briefed on Domestic Terrorism and Homeland Defense. The small break out groups met to continue discussions regarding local issues.

One of the local issues addressed in Mason County was the lack of a system to input Tribal Court protection and restraining orders in to the state computer system. This, at times, prevented valid orders from being enforced off the reservation. A follow-up meeting was scheduled and a system was put in place that is now being used successfully. Additional training for all law enforcement officers and others on protection orders is scheduled for May 3rd, 4th and 5th.

The summit wrapped up in the afternoon with all parties confirming progress toward working "Better Together".
